Mario opens a window into Pelican Bay SHU California Prison California's most notorious supermax facility, built in 1989 to house the worst of the worst. Hidden deep in the redwoods near the town of Eureka, California, Pelican Bay State Prison is one of the most notorious supermax facilities in the United States. It is home to some of the most dangerous criminals in the country, including members of the most notorious gangs. The prison is known for its extreme security and harsh conditions, and it has a reputation for being one of the most difficult places to escape from. The facility is built in a remote area of the state, surrounded by redwood forests, and is accessible only by a single road. The prison is divided into several units, each with its own set of rules and regulations. The most notorious gang members are housed in the SHU (Special Housing Unit), which is a high-security area of the prison. The SHU is known for its extreme isolation and lack of natural light, and it is often described as a "hell on earth." The prison has a long history of violence and unrest, and it has been the site of several major incidents, including the 1989 Pelican Bay Prison riot. The prison is currently facing several challenges, including a shortage of staff and a rising number of inmates. The California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation is working to address these issues and improve the conditions of the prison.
